AROUND IOWA

Two valuable resources for women in business are The Business Record's Lift Iowa publication (sign up here) and the IWLC's e-newsletter (sign up here). We strongly encourage you to sign up to receive these outstanding email publications.

- IWLC's annual Central Iowa Conference took place this month with great success. The theme, "Leadership: Empowered" was delivered to 800 attendees, plus 150 undergraduate speakers. Read a recap here. Check out the Facebook album here. Highlights of the conference included:
  - Keynote speaker Kathy Ireland, chair, CEO and chief designer of kathy ireland Worldwide, encouraged women to be vocal in their personal and professional lives. "As someone whose former job description was to 'shut up and pose,' don't ever let anyone silence you."
  - Barnard College President and author of "Wonder Women: Sex, Power, and the Quest for Perfection" Dr. Debora Spar called on both men and women to challenge leadership. "We need to invest and involve men in this conversation. Men want their daughters, sisters and wives to succeed."
- Rookie Smarts: Brilliant Strategies for Every Generation ... via IWLC blog.
- Three Women to Receive NAWBO Iowa Annual Awards: Connie Wimer, chairman of Business Publications Corporation Inc., will be the first woman business owner to receive NAWBO Iowa's Hall of Fame Legacy Award. Deb Duncan, marketing and administrative specialist at the Iowa Small Business Development Center, will receive the Advocate of the Year award. Christi Hegstad will receive the Woman Business Owner of the Year award.

Through the Grapevine: One Attendee On IWLC's Leadership: Empowered

- "Each speaker stretched my thinking in various ways. But I was most impressed by Connie Glaser's ability to sum up my two years of graduate school research in communication studies, specifically the principles of gender communication strategies and styles and interpersonal communication, in less than one hour. Glaser's message gives women the knowledge we need in order to become effective, successful communicators. in the boardroom or at the dinner table."
